Why do poor people often seem happier than rich people? Must a society lose its traditions in order to move into the future? How do you reconcile a commitment to non-violence when faced with violence? Will there be another Dalai Lama? These are some of the questions Rick Ray poses to the Dalai Lama – he actually poses more than 10 questions. With the insertion of background material and video clips during the actual interview process, the film is quite engrossing. It also touches on some fairly loaded political material, such as the fate of the Panchen Lama. The Dalai Lama comes across as very much an ordinary human being of great wisdom and great spirit. 85 minutes.
